

Mr Steve Walker

CIO, DHL Supply Chain, Asia Pacific

In DHL Supply Chain projects are mostly customer facing and excellent project management is the foundation on which growth is built.

Good quality projects are important to growth for many organizations and therefore should be seen as adding value similar to sales or consulting. Studies show that high performing organizations not only put fewer dollars at risk but are also more likely to be innovative and agile.

In DHL Supply Chain, we are continuing to invest in our project managers, tools and processes because we truly believe that project management is value add and essential to a high performing business.

Born in Manchester, UK, Steve moved to Singapore with his wife, Mary in 2012 to take up the role of CIO for DHL Supply Chain, responsible for Asia Pacific, Middle East & Africa.

In his current role, Steve is focused on quality, innovation and adding value to customers. In DHL IT is customer facing and virtually every customer win requires an IT project.

Steve holds a Master Science degree in Logistics and Transportation from Cranfield University, UK and is co-author of International Logistics and Supply Chain Outsourcing: From local to global.

Steve is a lifelong and passionate Manchester United fan.
